HONOLULU TO SAN FRANCISCO.

Amidst the booming of the guns from the British ship of war Caroline and the shore battery, and the cheering from the large concourse of people on shore, the steamship Australia, accompanied by the Cummins and the Eleu, steams slowly out of the Honolulu harbor, at precisely twelve o'clock, 12th of April. Here are many gay hearts on board, glad at the prospect of travel in other flands, but some with a touch of sadness in their joy, at leaving their own happy island homes. Soon we leave the town and harbor of Honolulu in our rear, and passing bright and sunny Waikiki, gay with afternoon sun shining on its pretty residences and long stretches of cocoanut groves, we approach Diamond Head, and now the accompanying vessels, on which are the King, the band and a large company, turn their heads back to Honolulu, and with the strains of the band playing Auld Lang Syne, and the loud aloha from many throats ringing in our ears, we wend our way into the broad Pacific. Faintly come the last notes of the band and the last distant aloha, bidding a long farewell to their Queen Kapiolani and party, on their way to foreign lands. Neptune now begins to assert his sway, and many who, one short hour ago, were so joyous and full of gaiety, are now not to be seen. To find them you must search through the sleeping berths, where, hidden away, they can give vent to the agonized feelings, engendered by mother ocean's assertion of her rights, or, in other words, to a severe fit of sea-sickness. What a word of agony is centered in a night suffering from this complaint. Only those can say who have been its victims, and the writer cannot lay claim to be one of these. The decks are now deserted and the bell rings for the first meal on this trip of the Australia, but is faintly responded to and though the tables are spread with many nice things, tempting to the palate of even an epicure, nothing can call these seasick mortals from their hiding places, and it takes some three or four days to bring many of them from the depths of agony into which they have been plunged. But time brings to pass many things and at last even the worst case recovers. The tables are filled at meal times, and full justice is done to the good fare provided by the O. S. S. Co., and the gay promenades on the hurricane deck in the evening, where the fair daughters of Hawaii, with those of other lands, disport themselves, gaily promenading to the music of the ever rolling ocean, or sitting in sweet converse with a transient swain, pass the fleeting hours away, or on other evenings some one of the passengers, for the amusement of the many, call for sweet music from the piano in the saloon, and with playing and singing the time goes pleasantly on. What a commotion when the cry of it is. One will have it that it is a brig, while another is just as certain that it is a bark, and so on, each certain that they are right, while likely as not they are all wrong, and it is a schooner.

A pleasant entertainment, consisting of a Chinese burlesque, in which Messrs. T. Lucas, E. Macfarlane and E. Dowsett were participants, as also singing and dancing, came off on the night of the 18th inst., and was much appreciated by the spectators. The ever jovial Paul Neumann has not been in the background in any amusements going forward, and his active presence on this occasion did much towards making it a success. And again on the evening of the 19th inst. an opera burlesque was performed under the able leadership of E. Macfarlane, and was a complete success in so far that it pleased the spectators.

Early on the morning of the 20th, the Farralone Islands are sighted and by 6 o'clock we are entering the Golden Gate, and soon after the guns of the Fort and a war ship in port gave their salute in honor of the Royal Visitor on board. The entrance to the Golden Gate is a pretty sight, but it has been described so often that a repetition of it is superfluous. We came alongside the wharf about 7:30, where all was animation and bustle. Soon the baggage was unloaded, each one claims his own, and soon the close neighbors of eight pleasant days are scattered apart.

General Dominis was in a very weak state on his arrival here, and had to be carried ashore. He was taken sick some three days before. Possibly this may interfere with the Royal tour, the programme of which is a week's stay in San Francisco, from thence to New York and Washington, arriving in England in time for the Jubilee Celebrations; and after a stay of some little time, get away ere the cold weather arrives, passing through the Suez Canal, visit the different lands of India and Japan, etc., and so on home to the Islands. There will be a nice little bill to pay for this. I can assure you the leader of the party spares no expense to make it a pleasant one for the members of it. The bill for champagne alone, on the Australia must be a fairly large one. The trip has been a very pleasant one. Nothing was wanting on the part of Capt. Houdlette and his officers to make it so, and it will long be remembered with feelings of pleasure. More anon. Aloha oukou. TRAVELLER.

San Francisco, April 21, 1887.

ADDRESS TO CAPT. HOUDLETTE.

The following address was presented to Captain Houdlette, of the steamship Australia, on the steamer's up trip to San Francisco:--ON BOARD O. S. S. AUSTRALIA,

APRIL 20, 1887. Dear Captain:-While we hope upon this parting we desire to express to you our kindly feelings, and our appreciation of the treatment which we have received on board your vessel. This sentiment is not expressed as conveying that the other commanders of the Oceanic line have not on all occasions treated those who have travelled with them, with every courtesy of officers and gentlemen, but to assure you of the consideration and friendship of the undersigned passengers on this most pleasant and satisfactory voyage. The trifling present which our committee is charged to hand to you we ask you to accept, not for its intrinsic value but as a memento of our companionship which we will be partly glad, and partly sorry to see ended to-morrow. Glad because we have to reach our several destinations, sorry that a pleasant trip from Honolulu to the Queen City of the Pacific is ended.

JOHN BROWN'S DIARY.

It is said that somewhere hid in the dark and dusty crypts of the Capitol are all, or nearly all, the papers taken from John Brown at Harper's Ferry. Repeated efforts have been made to find them, but in vain. A New York publisher, who has printed a great deal about the Harper's Ferry insurrection and intends soon to put in book form a series of magazine articles, has spent considerable time and money of late in ransacking the archives at the Capitol, so far with no results. Among these papers, and there was a trunkful of them originally, is Brown's diary. In it was a list classifying his friends in the scheme to free the slaves by insurrection. a sail is heard! how eagerly each He had two columns on facing
